TEMPERANCE AND PROHIBITION.

The cause of temperance is rapidly advancing, not because of the active work of the prohibition party, but because of the economic forces behind the movement. Large employers of labor all over the country are drawing the line against men who drink, and the time is at hand, when the hard drinker is down and out, so far as steady employment is concerned.

The Illinois Steel company, located at Joliet, Illinois, maintains a club house for the use of its men. During the winter months many bowling clubs are formed. Recently a member of one of these clubs secured a position in Joliet. Before his departure his fellow members gave a banquet in his honor at one of the hotels with twenty-five guests, foremen and men holding clerical positions with the Illinois Steel company present. When these men went to the table there was a glass of cocktail at each plate. When they left the table there was still a glass of cocktail at each plate. Not one had been touched.

This great steel company, employing 4,000 men, is doing all in its power to protect its employees from the drink habit. The company has discovered that safety first demands a clear brain and steady hand and so, all through the great plant is posted the following notice addressed:

"To the Employees of Joliet Works, Illinois Steel Company.

For the promotion of safety and welfare it is hoped that all employees will avoid the use of intoxicating liquors. Under the rules of Joliet Works any employee who uses intoxicating liquor while on duty will be discharged. In making promotions in any department of the plant, superintendents of departments and foremen will select for promotion only those who do not use intoxicating liquor."

(Signed) D. R. MATHIAS, General Superintendent.
(Signed) E. J. BUFFINGTON, President.

A census of the steel industry, recently taken, discloses the fact that similar regulations are common in many of the plants. That the liquor interests view the situation with alarm is evidenced by the following paragraph:

"One of the most pregnant signs of the times is the steady and increasing tendency of big corporations to encroach on the personal liberties of workers," says Mide's Criterion, a standard liquor trade magazine. And the Brewers' Journal remarks: "There are even companies and individual employers who threaten to discharge employees for drinking alcohol at any time. They do not care if it is social and economic slavery. Their main object is to protect their pocket-books."

There is but little sentiment about the present temperance campaign. It is a case of hard facts and hard common sense, and it is bound to win because it has back of it the best judgment of a body of men who are conservative and level-headed. The next generation will come to the surface free from the taint of alcohol, because the habit of drink will not be formed, and when the opportunity to form the habit is removed, there is nothing to it. Boys don't drink because they like it.

TWO ALTERNATIVES.

When Germany proclaimed a "war zone" around England this nation was confronted by two alternatives, one to file a sober and dignified protest which could be made the basis of negotiations at a Hague convention after the war, and to follow it up with an appeal to Americans to refrain from crossing the sea on other than American or neutral vessels.

This appeal could have been made without any concession of the rights of American citizens, but precisely on the same principle as would lead a sensible citizen, without in the slightest conceding his right to traverse the public streets at will, to avoid a street in which a gang of toughs were engaged in a gun-fight.

The other alternative was to take the stand that the rights of Americans who wished to go to sea must be respected, even when they were on the ships of the belligerents, and to fight if those rights were violated. Confronted by these two alternatives, Mr. Wilson chose neither. He wrote his warning of last February declaring that Germany would be held to a "strict accountability" if the life or property of an American was injured. The nation rang with applause of the president's "firm stand" and it sounded sweet to the presidential ears. Opinion differs as to whether Mr. Wilson, who has been consistently averse to seeking the advice of those better informed than himself, realized the seriousness of his words, or not, but there is no difference of opinion regarding the fact that he never expected to make them good.

The country was in no condition to go to war, and from the west came unmistakable evidence that the people did not wish to go to war. Unfortunately, however, Germany realized these facts quite as keenly as did the "White House." The president's threat—for such it was—was put down as "Yankee bluffing" and the "Lusitania" incident followed.

The newspapers had been ringing with praises of Woodrow Wilson as "the defender of humanity" and Mr. Wilson was charmed by their praise. But the "Lusitania" incident called for some sort of action. Mr. Wilson knew the country was not prepared for war, that the people did not favor war, and that he could not by any possibility make good his bluff. But to cease bluffing would mean to forfeit the role of "the defender of humanity." So Mr. Wilson bluffed again and wrote Germany that if there was a repetition of the "Lusitania" case this country would "omit no word or act" to punish the perpetrators. It was a perfectly plain threat—but it was a threat which both Wilson and von Jagow knew this administration would not and could not make good.

President Wilson is the one man in the nation on whom all eyes are focused. His position makes him the mouthpiece of the nation and his foreign policy has thus far kept us out of war, he is lauded by people who advocate peace at any price. It is worth something, however, to have the respect of the nations of the world, and this might have been maintained had the president not "bit off more than he could chew." We have been the laughing stock in Mexico for the past two years, and we are not seriously regarded by Germany today. The nation will be ripe for a change of administration next year, both for business and diplomatic reasons.

The treasurer's report shows that the receipts of the state fair, held in Milwaukee last week, were less by several thousand dollars than the receipts of last year. The people will discover in time that the Great City is poorly adapted for an agricultural display, and then the fair will be moved back in the country, where it belongs. Any one of half a dozen inland cities could make a better showing and state aid would not be the principal consideration.

Russia is neither France nor Belgium, and the German army is likely to wake up some rainy morning and discover that home is a thousand miles away and the walking not good. The great marshes of Russia are impassable six months of the year and the strategy of retreat may prove very significant. Time alone will tell.

The last issue of Bryan's Commoner is a Bryan issue, and the thirty-two pages are devoted to his speeches and wise sayings since he retired to private life. Wilson may find him a troublesome thorn in the flesh next year. He is as irrepresible as the colonel, and about as lively.

Secretary Redfield seems to have gone into his hole and pulled the cavity in after him, since the fiasco of the Eastland investigation. The only answer to this is, Redfield is an echo, and there are a number of echos connected with the Wilson cabinet.

If England can borrow a billion dollars it ought to be easy for the average man to negotiate a ten dollar loan in the home market, and yet some people have trouble.

"How much is your forty-cent butter?" asked Mrs. Wittlebean.
"Forty cents, special," replied the grocer after a moment's thought.
"I'll take a pound and a quarter," "Right," said Snickers as he wrapped up three-quarters of a pound of rancid butter. "What else?"
"A pound and an eighth of cheese," "Right," said the grocer, and reached under the counter for thirteen ounces of mouldy cheese that had been there since Tuesday a week. "What else?"
"A loaf of bread and a pound and a half of frankfurters," "Right," And Snickers wrapped a loaf of extra stale bread and a pound and a half of half smokes that had been condemned by the city inspectors two weeks before. "What else?"
"That's all," said Mrs. Wittlebean as she picked up her basket. "Remember, Mr. Snickers, you dine at my house tonight."
"Gurggle," gasped the grocer, and fell into the coffee bin in a swoon.

HAVING OWNER BEAR PART OF FIRE LOSS WOULD STOP ARSON

Commissioner Ekern Shows How Loser Insurance Could be Secured at Monterey Convention.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Monterey, Cal., Sept. 22.—That the use of a provision in fire insurance policies requiring the owner to bear a small first part of any loss would do away with a great mass of dishonest and excessive claims for small losses and benefit all honest property owners and permit an immediate reduction of fire insurance premiums of from 10 to 40 percent was urged by Former Insurance Commissioner Herman L. Ekern in an address before the national convention of insurance men and women in session at the Hotel Del Monte today.

"In our cities during thirty years," said Mr. Ekern, "the number of fires annually per capita has been treated. In perhaps 85 to 90 percent of these fires the owner now has his loss paid in full or overpaid. It is only when the loss exceeds the amount of the insurance that the owner bears any part of the burden. In this respect the present system of fire insurance is clearly on an unsound economic basis and tends to encourage carelessness and even arson, and imposes on the property owner an unjustifiable and excessive burden."

"There will of course be differences of opinion as to the relative advantage to be derived from fire marshal laws, building codes, fire limits, and other ordinances, inspections, educational and publicity campaigns, the imposition of legal responsibility to adjoining owner, or from regulation against over-insurance, or from other remedies in use or proposed. No doubt, all the remedies are helpful, but none of these, or any that may be suggested, will alone and unaided meet the problem."

"It will be generally agreed that the real problem in prevention of fires is to secure the active interest and co-operation of the individual property owner. All will agree that little progress has been made in arousing his interest. Multiplying the number of fires by three tends to multiply the loss in a like ratio. That this has not happened is cause for gratification and evidence of the good work that has really been done. Increases in number of fires is practically conclusive of the indifferent attitude of the average owner to the danger of loss by fire."

"This public attitude is due largely to the fact that the ordinary fire involves little or no property loss to the owner and often constitutes an advantage or even an actual gain. Not only are most losses paid in full, but they are overpaid. Over-liberal adjustments are made to avoid increased household expense and often to aid the agent in getting new business."

Mr. Ekern said that on the average in our cities 85 percent of the fires are confined to the premises and more than two-thirds to one floor. He said that the property involved was insured on an average from 40 to 60 percent of its value, and, roughly the fire amounted to about 5 percent and that of this fire loss about 95 percent was recompensed by insurance.

"Fire is a Profit.
"This means that nine out of ten city fires result in a profit or advantage to the owner," continued Mr. Ekern. "Out-of-date furnishings and unsalable merchandise are converted into more useful and cash items. The public attitude to the owner furnishing loss shades from active sympathy into indifference, and rarely is there any censure or approbrium. Is it any wonder that the fire is a common unconscious indifference to arson?"

"The significant thing is that through the full payment of fire loss, as we put a premium on having fires. In Europe partial losses are paid the same as in marine insurance, in the proportion the insurance bears to the total value."

A law was enacted in Wisconsin at the last session permitting companies to provide in the policy or in a rider that the owner should bear the first part of his loss to a specified percentage, not exceeding 5 percent of the amount of insurance. The fact that this provision has been used must be endorsed on the filing back of the policy, such endorsement giving the rate with and without this provision.

"The premiums for insurance could be greatly reduced by the use of such clauses," said Mr. Ekern. "The loss payments will be greatly reduced and there will be a great saving of adjustment expense."

TAKES FIRST PRIZE ON EXHIBIT OF CORN

W. T. Pomeroy Wins Premium on Golden Glow Shown at State Fair.

Edgerton, Sept. 22.—W. T. Pomeroy & Co., of Edgerton, pioneer packers of leaf tobacco and growers of tobacco seed, were awarded first premium on their exhibit of Golden Glow (Wisconsin No. 12), seed corn at the Wisconsin state fair, having the best ears of the Golden Glow on display. This corn was grown on old tobacco land many of the stalks reaching a height of twelve and one-half feet. The firm has in the past confined its agricultural interests to tobacco and seed, but during the present season decided to enter the exhibit of high grade seed corn. The Golden Glow, being the most highly recommended for Wisconsin and other northern states, was secured for foundation stock, and by careful selection of seed, the use of proper fertilizers, and thorough cultivation, prize winning results were obtained. Messrs. Pomeroy & Co. were recently advised of the fact that their exhibit leaf tobacco, produced by seed of their own growing, was awarded the Gold Medal at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco. These facts indicate that Wisconsin is well to the front as an agricultural state.

GERMAN SOLDIERS WELL TRAINED IN TIME FROM TRENCH

Even When Not Fighting the German Soldier Is Put Through Tactics That Will Make Him Perfect Fighter.

Frankfort, Germany, Sept. 22.—"Learning how to play, is a part of the curriculum of the embryo German soldier who is being prepared and trained for the front. In every garrison and barracks in the empire there are at present thousands and thousands of recruits young and old, and every last one of them has to know how to play before he is considered fit for the trenches.

The new policy is based upon the sound principle that the soldier in the hours or days when he is resting behind the front while his relief fights, must be doing something to occupy his mind and keep his hands busy.

An Associated Press correspondent recently made a fairly comprehensive tour of southern, western, and central Germany, and learned that the soldier without his thousands of men hard at work at the paradoxical combination of fighting and playing.

Rigorous drilling has by no means been omitted from the curriculum of the soldier under training, and he can probably do the famous goose step quite as well as he could in peace time. But, nevertheless, vast less attention is paid to it than in former years, for the reason that the goose step is not exactly an essential in the trenches of France or Russia.

One of the largest barracks are built around a square. Perhaps five hundred feet square—a square large enough to accommodate easily a dozen or a score of groups of soldiers. There is to the customer's rear, a series of white-clad soldiers, each carrying a rifle, bayonet fixed to the butt, and dummy shooting practice.

The first impression is almost invariably one of confusion, as the soldiers charge across the parade ground, throwing themselves suddenly to earth, rising and charging again.

It is a series of wooden walls, higher and higher into the air. These are imaginary fortress walls that the soldier is to scale, and for hours the others' shoulders and clamber over. It is this strenuous work that is most popular.

One corner of the parade ground is reserved for the largest, and such simple games as blind man's bluff, tag of war, leap frog and the like. The favorite game is one in which a score of soldiers form a circle, while two of their number, blindfolded, attempt to catch each other in the center. It is all absurdly simple, and interesting to watch for a moment, but experience shows that it has great value in relieving mental strain.

A soldier coming out from under fire has about two desires—to sleep and to eat. After he has done these two things, he is ready for anything. The physical exercises that relieve cramped limbs and make him laugh, are approximately six weeks of training in the trenches or in the field.

If a portion of each day is devoted to target practice the man of soldiers of German caliber will have a reasonable degree of accuracy. The cavalry and artillery training takes longer, the latter about ten weeks, because the soldier must know something about the mechanism of a gun and its use.

The infantryman does not have to learn anything about a cannon, nor does he have to learn anything about marching and bayonet drill, and the cavalryman's chief attention is to have his horse and his sabre and lance to fight with them. The soldier with characteristic German thoroughness.

MAY CALL SPECIAL SESSION OF SENATE

President Believes Rules Should Be Revised to Curtail Debate.

Washington, Sept. 22.—The advisability of a special session of the senate within the next few days, is being seriously considered by President Wilson. It was said today at the White House, if the session is called it will be primarily to give the senate an opportunity to revise its rules in order to curtail debate. The president, it was said, would reach a decision in the matter within a week or ten days.

CHAPEL ATTENDANCE QUESTION PUZZLES BELOIT PROFESSORS

May Modify Ruling in Case of Catholic Students at Faculty Meeting This Afternoon.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Beloit, Sept. 22.—Matters pertaining to the controversy now experienced in Beloit college over Catholic students being required to attend the chapel services will come to a climax this afternoon at four o'clock when the faculty of the college will hold a meeting to decide the question whether the Catholic students should be excused from the services. The opinion of the president is said to be that they should be excused, and the division has been made through the belief that to allow the Catholic students freedom from the chapel services would be against the principles established by the college as being strictly non-sectarian.

President Edward D. Eaton this morning granted an interview voicing his personal opinion on the problem facing the Beloit faculty, which will undoubtedly bear weight at the faculty meeting this afternoon.

"I regard the services as held by Beloit college as being strictly non-sectarian and in my opinion are such that nothing but good can result from them. However, I can appreciate the objections offered and for a Catholic student to attend chapel is a violation of faith. Personally I feel that if a proper substitute can be secured for the Catholic students to attend it would be the proper adjustment of the difficulty. It is proper, I mean, that if the Catholic priests could provide special services at which the students of that denomination could be required to attend and which the professors of the college would recognize as an equivalent to the course in the college."

President Eaton was asked if students of other denominations attending the college should be excused on the ground that the objection to this question was that the objections were not as fundamental as those connected with the present controversy.

"The ruling that will be reached at the faculty meeting tonight will effect about twenty students at Beloit college and the result is being closely watched throughout the state and other colleges as the decision will have an effect on the religious policy of other schools in the same position as Beloit."

Optional at Lawrence.

Appleton, Wis., Sept. 22.—Relative to Bishop Messmer's stand on Catholic students at Beloit College who are obliged to attend chapel, Dr. Samuel Plautz, Catholic students attending Lawrence College are not required to attend chapel or study the Bible if they desire otherwise. It is left entirely to them with them. This rule has been in vogue for years."

BRITISH NEED NEW LEADERS IN ARMY

Oxford Professor of Military History Declares Nation Must Find New Leaders to Win.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Oxford, Eng., Sept. 22.—That England's only hope of winning in the war is in her finding new leaders, both for the army and for the state, from among her young college men, is the conclusion of Dr. Spence Wilkinson, professor of military history at Oxford university, in a review of the war work of Oxford men. His review is a forcible indictment of old-fogyism and red-tape, as exemplified by the "system" of the British war office.

"I have been amazed," writes Professor Wilkinson, "through all these months of the war to see that the army is unable to distinguish between men of various capabilities and possibilities who are granted officers' commissions. It makes them all second hand. When the war is over, the army will be a mass of mediocre men, the product of the system of the British war office."

"By far the best of my pupils in the Officers Training classes since the war began have been the young college tutors, the pick of the university graduates. When they have been put to the test, they have shown that they are not only capable of doing the work of the war office, but they are also capable of doing the work of the state."

Professor Wilkinson has been in close touch with the undergraduate life at Oxford for six years, and he declares that until this war came, the college life was a life of ease and comfort. The army were far from being the best class of undergraduates. The war has given the British army for the first time the really finest manhood of the country."

"After a year or two of work at Oxford as Professor of Military History," explains Dr. Wilkinson, "I was not taking any of the best men from Oxford. Officers' commissions were given to men below the average of intelligence and training in the university. I believed to be coming—I had discussed it in a volume written just before coming to Oxford as a teacher—the army would need leaders of the highest type, men of the highest intelligence as is expected of those who are about to make a mark in the learned professions. The best soldiers at the War Office agreed with me, but no definite action was taken."

"Then came the war. Immediately the whole of young Oxford joined the army, becoming officers either in the Territorial army or in the new Regular regiments. Each term a class of these new candidates attended my lectures. They worked with a zeal without precedent. In my experience and quickly mastered."

"Even in these classes, I noticed the difference in powers. There were

No. 22 S. River St. Janesville

Forty Years Ago

Janesville Daily Gazette, Sept. 22, 1875.—Mr. Frank H. Dutton left for Saint Paul this afternoon, where he will remain until the holidays. The dining room of the Southern Wisconsin Fair is made in this week's weekly. It is a fair itself. Our third ward friend, Mr. Myron Gibbs, is made happier by the addition of a ten pound boy to the family. All well. Verily, the third ward is prosperous.

It is said that Burr Robbins will reach Janesville on the 15th of October, when he will go into winter quarters. He is now in the western part of the state doing a good business. He should receive a generous benefit when he returns home.

Mr. D. D. Wilson and Emmett Addy took an "overland" ride to the handsome city of Whitewater, today.

Cincinnati, Sept. 22.—The "Times" New Albany, Ind., special says: Peter Buchheit's mammoth frame brewery burned at six o'clock this morning. Loss, ten thousand dollars; insured in Louisville and Indianapolis German companies.

"Pa," said Johnny, who is a persistent knowledge-seeker, "what is a law-giver?" "There isn't any such thing, Johnny," replied the old gentleman. "No law-giver has been involved in considerable litigation in his time."

"But this book says that somebody was a great law-giver," persisted the youngster. "Then it's a mistake," rejoined his father. "Law is never given. It's created in mighty small quantities at mighty high figures."

A school teacher was trying to impress upon a scholar's mind that Columbus discovered America in 1492. "Now, John," he said, "I will give you the date in rhyme so that you won't forget it. 'In fourteen hundred and ninety-two Columbus sailed the ocean blue.' Now, can you remember that, John?"

"Yes, Sir," replied John. "Next day the teacher said: 'John, when did Columbus discover America?'"

"In fourteen hundred and ninety-three Columbus sailed the dark blue sea!"

A plumber was working in the house of a wealthy stockbroker, when the lady of the house entered. "Butler," she said, with a suspicious glance towards the plumber, "remove the silver from the sideboard and lock it up at once."

But the plumber was in no wise disconcerted. "Tom," he said to his apprentice, who accompanied him, "take my watch and chain and these coppers home to my missus at once; there seem to be dishonest people about this house."

MANY NEW GAME LAWS PASSED DURING YEAR

LEGISLATURES OF FORTY-THREE STATES TAKE ACTION ON VARIOUS GAME MATTERS.

A RESUME OF CHANGES

Several Bills Introduced With Object of Harmonizing State and National Laws on Migratory Birds.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—More than 240 new game laws were enacted during 1915—a larger number than in any previous year except 1911, according to "Parmer's" Bulletin 692, "Game Laws for 1915." Forty-three states held regular legislative sessions, and in all of these states except Arizona, Georgia and Nebraska, some changes were made in the statutes protecting game. The largest number of new game laws passed in any one state was 61 in North Carolina, but in California, Connecticut, Maine, New Jersey, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin the number reached 10 or more. Several measures were vetoed, including a general game bill in Idaho, the first bill appropriating the hunting-license fund in Pennsylvania, a bill protecting birds in California, and in Washington, for the smaller shore birds, were made to conform with the regulations under the federal law. Uniformity was also secured by provisions in the laws of Connecticut, Maine, New Mexico, North Dakota, Washington and Wisconsin, prohibiting hunting between sunset and sunrise. On the other hand, Delaware adopted a resolution opposing the migratory bird law, and Ohio and Rhode Island, which had harmonized their seasons in 1914, changed the seasons on waterfowl this year.

As a result of the decision of the supreme court of the United States on January 19, 1914, sustaining the alien hunting law of Pennsylvania, legislation prohibiting aliens from hunting or owning shotguns or rifles was enacted in at least four states—Massachusetts, New Jersey, North Dakota and West Virginia—but certain exceptions based on property qualifications were made in Massachusetts and New Jersey.

Close Seasons Extended.
Close seasons extending for several years were provided for certain kinds of big game and also for game birds. In Montana, moose were protected until 1918 in Montana. Moose were protected four years in Maine, the first absolute close season on this species for two years—since the suspension of hunting from 1878 to 1880. Antelope were given indefinite protection in New Mexico and Montana. In Michigan, New Mexico, and Oklahoma prairie chickens were protected for several years. Michigan extended complete protection also to quail, imported pheasants, grouse and wood ducks for five years. Minnesota protected doves, woodcock, plover and wood ducks until 1918. New Mexico gave protection to pheasants, bobwhites, pigeons, and swans. Oklahoma protected doves, grouse, wood ducks and curlew. Several birds were removed from the game list and protected instead of the year. Oklahoma of a certain protection to pelicans, gulls and herons. Tennessee declared ring-neck pheasants, bullfrogs, robins and meadowlarks to be non-game birds. In a few cases protection was removed from certain species—notably the turkey buzzard in Delaware, Florida, and North Carolina, owls and starlings in New Hampshire, and cormorants in Illinois and North Dakota.

Novel Features of State Laws.
Among the novel features in the laws this year may be mentioned the declaration of Florida law that the ownership of game is vested in the respective counties; the provision in the California law protecting spike bucks, or deer with unbranched horns, instead of deer with horns of a certain length; and the Wyoming experiment of allowing the killing of 50 bull moose under $100 licenses instead of indefinite number during a limited season. Methods of hunting were restricted in Michigan by prohibiting the use of automobiles in hunting parties, and in Indiana by prohibiting the use of searchlights or other artificial lights attached to autos for hunting game on or near a highway. Several new restrictions on shipments appeared for the first time. Illinois prohibited importation from points outside the state of any game except deer legally killed. Pennsylvania prohibited shipment of game by parcel post, and Wisconsin, shipment under express. Connecticut authorized the commissioners of fisheries and game to grant permits to bring in game lawfully killed outside the state, provided such game is not offered for sale.

Quail.
Notwithstanding the agitation in favor of protecting quail for several years in some sections, no bills of this kind were passed. In California, the states still provide quail shooting. The seasons were shortened six weeks in Oklahoma and two weeks in Nevada. Limits were established for the first time in Arkansas and New Hampshire, reduced in Iowa from 25 to 15 per day, in Oklahoma from 25 to 10, in Minnesota from 15 to 10, and increased in Nevada from 10 to 15. Most of the states now have a limit of 25 or less per day.

Waterfowl.
All the states now allow waterfowl hunting, but the wood duck is protected for several years throughout the northern zone and in the southern zone in the states of California, Kansas and West Virginia. Duck hunting limits were established for the first time in Arkansas and Connecticut, reduced in Oklahoma from 25 to 10, and increased in Missouri from 10 to 15. Most of the states now have a limit of 25 or less per day.

Open Seasons.
Open seasons were lengthened in Montana on elk and deer two weeks; in Florida on deer and birds of prey two weeks; in Minnesota on quail 20 days; and in Nevada on sage hens four and a half months, on grouse one month, and on quail two weeks. New Jersey reverted to the former plan of hunting deer on four consecutive Wednesdays instead of five consecutive days.

Seasons were shortened in a number of states. In the case of big game the deer season was curtailed in Arkansas three months in Oregon and Washington two weeks.

In New Mexico the seasons were generally shortened and arranged in two districts divided at latitude 35 degrees. In California the dove season was made later and in Minnesota shortened 20 days. In Oklahoma the quail season was curtailed six weeks, and in Michigan, Nevada (ducks), Tennessee, and Wyoming, spring shooting of waterfowl was abolished.

Laws Protecting Big Game.
The more important changes affecting big game included the closing of the season for four years on moose in Maine; authorization for the killing of 50 bull moose in Wyoming; lengthening the season on elk in Montana two weeks; closing the season on mountain sheep in Montana; changes affecting deer in 7 states, including the removal of protection in Florida, Nevada, New Jersey and Wyoming; establishment of a limit in Arkansas; and decrease in the limits in Alaska, Michigan, Montana and Nevada.

Under present conditions deer hunting is permitted in 36 states, in about one-third of which the hunter is limited to one deer a season and in most of the others to two. Fifteen states protect deer at all seasons and allow only bucks to be killed—namely, Alabama, Arizona, California, Georgia, Idaho, Missouri, Mississippi, New Mexico, Nevada, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin. Pennsylvania requires that deer killed shall have horns 2 inches above the hair. New York and Vermont at least 3 inches long, and West Virginia 4 inches long, while California prohibits entirely the killing of spike bucks.

Edgerton News

Edgerton, Sept. 22.—The street and bridge committee and County Road Commissioner C. E. Moore viewed the pavement that was washed out at the cemetery yesterday, with a view of preventing a recurrence of the damage done. The water washed out about ninety feet of the pavement during the last freshet. It was at first thought that it would be feasible to build a gutter and shoulder to the road out of quarry chips, but after a careful estimate of the cost it was decided to put a more permanent gutter and it was decided to make a gutter seven feet in width with an eight inch curb and to connect it with the pavement doing away with the earth shoulder entirely. It was proposed to begin this gutter at the main gate of the cemetery and to extend it to the culvert at the bottom of the hill, thus insuring an absolute and permanent street.

AT MYERS THEATRE.
One of the most extraordinary films of the past year is George Klean's latest product, "The Money Master," founded on Cleveland Moffett's famous stage drama, "The Battle." It may truly be said to surpass anything of its kind in magnificence and constructive detail, requiring some four months to complete, and costing vastly in excess of modern features of its type. "The Money Master" is a story of the gold lust and the Ghetto, showing the two extremes of society from the mansion of the oil king to the tenement slums of the East Side.

Frank Sheridan, long known to the theatre-going public for his remarkable work in similar roles, plays John Haggleton, the millionaire, flint-hearted business master, supported by Paul McAllister, "The Money Master" will be seen at Myers theatre tonight.

AT MAJESTIC THEATRE.
Lenore Ulrich Tonight, in "Capital Punishment." The Majestic Theatre offers for tonight a star of unusual magnitude, Lenore Ulrich, in a three part feature, "Capital Punishment."

Lenore Ulrich has been taking the country by storm in Oliver Rosen's stage masterpiece, "The Bird of Paradise." She has packed theatre after theatre, and in nearly every case it was necessary to remove the orchestra to make room for seats. She is a brunette beauty and will make "Capital Punishment" a wonderful picture tonight.

Gowns Fit Better Over ATHENA Underwear

1. Not the fit of ordinary underwear but "glove fit."
2. Woven and tailored to really fit the figure—patented features of merit
3. Athena garments are durable and have a dainty elegance—they are tailored to fit—therefore wear right.

Here are the features that give Athena its comfort, its daintiness and its tailored fit

Low Neck Sleeveless Suit
Just as a woman is fuller across the bust than the back, so this garment is made with extra fullness in front.

Sloping Shoulders and Sleeves
Conforms to the shoulders without wrinkling under arms.

Perfect Shoulder Stay
Keeps garment from stretching across the shoulder, and holds sleeve in place.

Curved Armhole
Brings arm seams to the natural curve of the shoulder and holds garment snugly and smoothly up under arm, doing away with unnecessary cloth.

Patent Seat
This consists of a plait on each side of the back, instead of extra cloth in the middle where it causes discomfort. Always stays closed and allows sufficient room, sitting or standing.

Three-Cornered Gusset
Is so shaped as to relieve the usual strain at the thigh. Insures greater comfort and longer wear.
